It looks like we are looking around the end of November of this year as the anticipated completion of construction date. Do you think it's possible to have December 31, 2013 be the expiration date to allow for any unforeseen delays, like weather, etc.? You know how it is in southern Florida.

Chuck:

I am preparing the final package for the air construction permit for signature and need to know when you anticipate the construction of the carbon injection system to be complete so I can specify an expiration date of the permit.

Thanks
