Good Morning Dick

Each of these plants are about 30-35 years old and have not been modified much over the years. There are no central dust collectors and each of the plants has a truck loading or batching station. They control fugitive emissions using a water-spray misting bar above the truck loading area and the cement scale vents into the truck being loaded.

Bruno,

This is in addition to my email below.

I need to know the same truck loadout information for both facilities if you can.

Thanks,

Dick

Bruno,

Thank you for your very prompt response.

There is one additional item of information that I have since found was not present on the forms.

We have listed in our data base a truck loadout for the Belleview Plant, but none for the Ocala Plant. Would you be so kind to research that for me and if there is one are there any associated emission control devices such as a central baghouse or whatever?

Thank you for your assistance.

Have a great day!

Dick
