Subject: Re: Walt Disney World Resort Complex: Lundel System @ Reedy Creek Services, Inc. area.

4/15/99

The facility will not be depositing any waste material on Disney's property; and, any that they need to discard will have to be done so at a permitted/ approved solid waste facility. I do not know if there are any Department solid waste permitting requirements regarding the current activity...I've never checked on it before? I don't know of any solid waste issues other than having to have an approved place to discard whatever solid waste that they will generate from the process. Disney has had a permit for its rubble and construction debris, which is where some of the waste stream went, but will no longer be receiving any of the system's waste stream after its sale.

Sincerely,

Bruce

Bruce,

Will these new folks have to get a solid waste permit for the compositing aspects and an individual air permit for the air emissions?
